SHOPPERS should buy meat only as an occasional treat to help protect future food supplies and keep prices down, MPs have warned.

Britain is “never more than a few days away” from a significant food shortage, a report has said

Companies should also be penalised for wasting food, a report by them says.

The International Development Committee said Britain is “never more than a few days away” from a significant food shortage.

*Britain faces a food shortage
MPs have warned*

The MPs, in a report Global Food Security, said the Government should cut the huge amount of discarded produce – estimated to be 30 per cent across the world.

They said meat should be eaten only occasionally and farmers should graze livestock rather than feed them grain.

The committee added: "Consumers should be encouraged over time to reduce how often they eat meat."
