IF you're feeling glum, cheer up... the end of the world wasn't nigh after all.

Predictions that killer earthquakes would strike at 6pm last night, killing us all, have thankfully been proven wrong.

American evangelical radio pastor Harold Camping had predicted the Rapture - the time when God's chosen people ascend to heaven and the rest of us burn in hell.

But he got his dates in a muddle - like in 1994.

As the deadline passed, users posted jokes on - Twitter. One wrote: "It's past 6pm in New Zealand... the Rapture's skipped us."

Gloomy Mr Camping now says we will be wiped out on October 21 [2011].
