Introduction

It is said that democracy can be a fickle mistress, and the following material overviews how Adolf Hitler and his Nazi Party used the democratic process to "legally" achieve their goals:

The Events

13 March 1932 - Presidential Election (Four Candidates):

Hindenburg	49.6 percent (18,651,497 votes)
Hitler	30.1 percent (11,339,446 votes)
Thaelmann	13.2 percent
Duesterberg	6.8 percent

19 April 1932 - Runoff Election:

Hindenburg	53.0 percent (19,359,983)
Hitler	36.8 percent (13,418,547 votes)
Thaelmann	10.2 percent

01 June 1932 - President Hindenburg appoints Franz von Papen as chancellor of Germany.

31 July 1932 - Reichstag Election

This election produces a major victory for Nazi Party.

NAZI Party wins 230 seats in the Reichstag, making it the largest political party, but it falls short of a majority in the 608 seat assembly.

06 November 1932 - Reichstag Election

NAZI Party loses two million votes and loses 34 seats - wins 196 seats.

The NAZI Party was still the largest political party, but it had lost ground among the voters.

30 January 1933 - President Hindenburg appoints Adolf Hitler chancellor of Germany.

Immediately after his appointment as Chancellor, Hitler, in his first appeal to the German nation, 01 February 1933, asks to be allowed "just four years" in order to carry out the task of national reconstruction, after which he will call an election whereby the people could accept or reject him and National Socialism.

27 February 1933 - The Reichstag Fire

23 March 1933 - Reichstag Election

The NAZI Party has a majority and is able to ratify the "Enabling Act".

The Results:

For Hitler	441 votes
Against Hitler	84 votes
Majority for Hitler:	84%

12 November 1933 - Election and Referendum

Hitler felt it necessary to prove the German nation's sincerity in its peaceful intentions; so he called an election combined with a referendum that stated: "The German Government and the German nation are united in the sincere wish to examine and solve dispassionately, by means of negotiations, all pending questions with all other nations, including Germany's former adversaries. The German Government and the German nation are prepared to conclude long term continental pacts of non aggression with the object of securing peace, the economic prosperity, and the general reconstruction of Europe."

The results:

Total Votes cast:	43,491,575
Votes in favour of the government:	40,632,628
Government majority:	95%

02 August 1934 - President Hindenburg Dies

The title of president is abolished, and Hitler's title becomes: "Fuehrer and Reich Chancellor".

13 January 1935 - Saar Region Referendum

After the First World War, The Versailles Treaty deprived Germany of the Saar territory, falsely claiming as justification that the region was historically French and with a French population of 150,000. In fact, the French population was just 2,000. For every French citizen in the Saar, there were 250 Germans.

On 13 January 1935 free election which were observed by international observers were held in which the electorate were asked whether they wished to remain as French citizens or would prefer to become part of the Third Reich.

The results:

In Favour of Unification with Germany:	477,119
In Favour of No Change:	46,513
In Favour of Remaining French:	2,124
Majority in favour of German Unification:	90.5%

29 March 1936 - Promised Referendum

True to Hitler's word, on 29 March 1936, the German nation was given the promised referendum to express approval or disapproval of the National Socialist state. The election was free election and was without fear or intimidation, and there was adequate provision made for international monitoring by neutral observers.

The Results:

Total Qualified Votes: 45,453,691
 Total Votes Cast: 45,001,489
 Votes "No" or Invalid: 540,211
 Votes "Yes" For Hitler's NSDAP: 44,461,278
Majority for Hitler's NSDAP: 98.8%

10 April 1938 - Austria Referendum

The Austrian Government, on 13 March 1938, enacted a constitutional law concerning a referendum for the reunion of Austria with the Third Reich. On 18 March 1938, Hitler dissolved the Reichstag and announced conformity with the referendum which was announced on 10 April 1938. The peoples of both nations were to be given the opportunity to decide for or against Austria's unification with Germany.

At this election the NSDAP and the KPD between them won a majority of seats (319 of 608). Since both parties opposed democracy and neither would join or support any ministry, this made the formation of a majority government committed to democracy impossible. The result was weak ministries governing by decree

Although support for the NSDAP fell at this election, the NSDAP and the KPD still won a majority of seats (296 out of 584) between them. This rendered this Reichstag no more workable than its predecessor. This stalemate led to the appointment of Adolf Hitler, the Nazi party leader, as Reich Chancellor in January 1933.

This election took place under the Nazi government in conditions of violence and intimidation aimed particularly at the SPD and KPD. The "Kampffront" was the old DNVP renamed, and threw its support in with the NSDAP after the elections, giving the NSDAP a majority. Moreover, the KPD was banned immediately after the elections and the KPD deputies never took their seats, giving the NSDAP a majority in its own right. In March the Reichstag passed an "Enabling Act" by which it effectively ceded its powers to the Reich Chancellor, Adolf Hitler. In June the SPD was banned and the Zentrum voluntarily dissolved. In July the DNVP was absorbed by the NSDAP and all other parties were banned. The Nazi Party now had full control
